Summarize why you are interested in serving:

I am strongly committed to helping the Northfield-area community plan to be proactive in addressing challenges related to climate change, both in terms of community responses to mitigate contribution to anthropogenic climate change, and to respond to the inevitable climate change that is already here or coming soon.

Summarize your personal background and attributes you feel are relevant to consideration of your appointment such as community involvement, experience serving on governing boards, training, education, work history, or other personal values, experience or perspectives:

I have extensive professional experience working on energy-related issues. For the past nine years I have managed a program at the Dakota County Community Development Agency, funded by federal and gas and electric utility grants, that assists low-income residents of Dakota, Scott, and Carver counties in making their homes as energy-efficient as possible. I worked in the past in similar positions delivering energy-efficiency and renewable energy programs and services in the nonprofit sector and as a private consultant. I served on the Northfield Mayor's Energy Task Force in 2007-2008, and was active with several former members of that task force, along with other community members, in working with the City's EQC over the past year or so to promote the concept of Northfield climate action planning. I was a founder and active member of the local renewable energy education and advocacy group, RENew Northfield, from 2001 to 2007, as we played an important role in generating community support for the development of Carleton's first wind turbine, which came online in 2004.
