Continuity of Service	Lunch breaks must be scheduled in such a manner to ensure continuity of service and should be scheduled so that a department is not left unattended during normal business hours.
Working Through Lunch	If a non-exempt employee (eligible for overtime pay) is required to work while eating or to take a lunch break of twenty (20) minutes or less, the time will be considered “worked” and the employee will be paid. Incidental interruptions do not qualify as working through a lunch break. Working through lunch is the exception not the rule and must be authorized by the supervisor and is not to be done at the employee’s discretion.
Working Through Breaks	There may be times during heavy workloads that an employee will be required to work through a rest break period. This does not extend the number of hours an employee is compensated for that day nor does it allow for the employee to use the time another day.
Paid Nursing Breaks	Nursing mothers and lactating employees will be provided reasonable paid break times to express milk for her infant child during the twelve months following the birth of the child, unless it would cause undue business disruption. The paid break time times must, if possible, run concurrently with any break times already provided.
